Kathaleen Rose

Eternal laughter forcing light into the darkest corners of memory, this is your gift. To lift the loneliness and warm the cold. The beauty of your soul has always been.

Apparent to view, that Mother's calling, to nurture to protect, to love, and sometimes...scold. My memory is filled with images that are forever linked to you. Miniature roses and Lilac blooms, braided rugs, and harvest moons. Singing and dancing on the front room floor, the way your smile causes my spirit to soar. That joy of youth within you will never diminish.

It springs forth without question or restraint, drawing us in. Offering safe heaven, a familiar resting place. Were sorrow will cease, and weary souls replenish. I have watched as earthly sorrow pressed you to your knees, when pain has washed over you, causing you to question your beginning and life's path.

Bringing great cries of suffering from your child's heart. Damaging even that which makes you great. But you held on, you began again. Such is your strength, your true progression. This is the spirit I see in my heart when I look at you, when I feel your love, when your embrace surrounds me, when my memory opens. And truth floods out. Eternal is your laughter, your heart, and your faith. Eternal is our bond and sisterhood. Because you bring the light that lifts the loneliness and warms the cold. And I love you for it.
