A child is a light that brightens our life,
Through laughter and tears, through joy and strife.
Each day brings surprises, both great and small.
We rejoice when they triumph, and cry when they fall.

Through days and years, they grow and progress.
Each day we pray they will pass that day's test.
We see the potential they bring to each day
We try to lift them, to stand in the fray.

A light has gone out and left us to stay.
We'll miss them and feel their loss in all ways.
We know that their mission on this earth is done.
God looked down and said, "I need this one!"

So, he has a mission in heaven to fill.
We can join him later, and hope that we will.
So, each day we'll miss him, his laughter, and tears.
The days will pass swiftly, and so will the years.

One day, reunited we'll see him again.
Eternally together, just as we began.
