“When one door closes, another opens but we often look so long and so regretfully upon the closed door that we do not see the ones which open for us.
When a wish seems to slip through our fingers, we often brood over what we could have,
should have done different to make it come true.
But perhaps that dream wasn’t really meant for us and another awaits, one that will make us happier than we imagined possible.
When we leave the past behind,
we move toward a brighter future.”

“Now Lord, you’ve known me a long time. You know me better than myself. You know that each day I am growing older and may become very old so meanwhile, please keep me from the habit of thinking I must say something on every subject and on every occasion. Release me from trying to straighten out everyone’s affairs. Make me thoughtful; but not moody, helpful but not overbearing. I’ve got a certain amount of knowledge to share but also forgive the knowledge I lack. Seal my lips on my aches and pains. Help me to listen to others of retelling their afflictions. I would like to have improved memory but will settle for growing humility. Keep me reasonably kind; as an embittered old person is a constant burden.”
